About the Speaker

Professor Jenny Hamilton joined the University of London International Programmes as Director of the Undergraduate Laws Programme in January 2010. As Director, she was primarily responsible for driving forward strategic planning and key initiatives for the programme. From January 2015, she took over as Acting Director for the Postgraduate Laws Programme.

Prior to joining the University of London, she was a professor of law at the University of Strathclyde’s Law School in Glasgow, Scotland where she lectured from 1996 to 2009. She graduated from the University of Adelaide, South Australia, and then undertook postgraduate studies at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland. She is a qualified barrister and solicitor in Australia, and is also a qualified teacher. Her main teaching areas include commercial and international economic law, and financial services regulation. Professor Hamilton has researched and published widely in the area of consumer law and financial regulation.

The University of London Postgraduate Laws Programmes are conducted through University College London and Queen Mary University of London, which are rated as among the top 10 law faculties in the United Kingdom. The programmes, which offer a wide range of subjects and specialisations, are flexible, and Members will be able to earn their postgraduate qualifications on a progressive basis. This flexibility helps Members to determine how to pace themselves through the postgraduate programmes. Upon enrolment, Members will receive complete learning materials, including up-to-date syllabi, study guides, textbooks, access to eCampus including online library, annual recent developments, past year examination questions, and skill guides.

Members can choose to register for individual modules (for professional development purposes), PG Cert (five modules), PG Dip (10 modules), or LLM (four courses composed of 16 modules).

Assessments will be conducted in May and October each year in Malaysia, and Members can choose to register for any number of modules for each examination. The assessment will require

Members to answer one out of two questions in a 45-minute examination for each module assessed.

Members may opt to do one of the following:

(Fees correct as at 1 Jan 2015)
