Registration for the seminar will begin at 2:00 pm

Music can popularise, and enhance the performance and success of, a film or television programme. This seminar will introduce participants to the copyright issues that arise when using music in a film or television programme. The speakers will examine the roles of film and television producers, broadcasters, recording labels, publishers, composers, musicians and performers in film and television production. Film and television executives and their legal and business advisers will gain insight into the licensing or clearing of these rights for the production and exploitation of a film or television programme.

About the Speakers

Joseph Lourdesamy is a media and entertainment counsel, and has experience in advising, negotiating and drafting documents for high-profile international media and entertainment transactions. He is an advocate and solicitor, and advises on legal and business issues involving television, radio, print, theatrical, internet and mobile content. He has practised as a barrister in England and acted as entertainment counsel for a Milan-based commercial television broadcaster. Joseph was also Head Counsel of Entertainment and Production for an international radio and television broadcaster based in Kuala Lumpur.

Dr Asugan Pechi Muthu is the General Manager of One Stop Music (OSM) Berhad, and is primarily responsible for the management, operations and business development of the company. OSM is a one-stop rights-clearing centre for the majority of independently produced and published music in Malaysia, as it represents the major independent music companies. OSM currently has more than 125 members, comprising music record labels and music publishing companies that represent some of Malaysia and Indonesia's well-known artistes. Dr Asugan graduated with a Doctorate in Business Administration majoring in Human Resources Management. He also holds a Masters in Business Administration with a double major in Human Resources and Operations Management.
