Automated Decision-Making in Government and the Protection of Administrative Law Principles This session will address the position of core administrative law principles in the move towards greater automation in government decision-making. A shift towards automated systems may test central public law principles, particularly the rules relating to the delegation of authority and the principles against the fettering of discretion and mechanical decision-making by public authorities. Speakers (1) Datuk Brenndon Keith Soh, Sabah State Attorney-General (2) Steven Rares KC, Former Judge, Federal Court of Australia (2006–2023) (3) Andrew Butler KC, Thorndon Chambers, Wellington, New Zealand Moderator Abraham Au Tian Hui, Partner, G S Nijar & Associates	Has the Time Come for Mandatory Mediation in Disputes? Recent developments in mediation-related laws have heightened the significance of mediation in the region. With the current increased case load in the courts, a system that introduces the mandatory mediation of disputes could well be seen to be an attractive form of dispute resolution. This session will address the position of mediation in the legal profession today, with a particular focus on the need to preserve the core principle of party autonomy in the dispute resolution process. Speakers (1) The Honourable Justice Dato' Lim Chong Fong, Judge, Court of Appeal of Malaysia (2) Tan Sri Nallini Pathmanathan, Former Judge, Federal Court of Malaysia; Chairperson, Malaysian Media Council; Judge, Qatar International Court and Dispute Resolution Centre (3) Datuk S Nantha Balan, Former Judge, Court of Appeal of Malaysia; Consultant, Adnan Sundra & Low (4) Andrew Butler KC, Barrister, Tanfield Chambers, United Kingdom Moderator Murshidah Mustafa, Vice-President, Malaysian Bar; Partner, Fariz Halim & Co	New Geopolitical Alliances and the Traditional Rules-Based Order This session explores how the shifting geopolitical alliances today challenge the core principles of international legal norms, including multilateralism and sovereign equality. The panellists will address how recent trade and foreign policies of countries have resulted in the formation of new alliances between nations and the role of international institutions in the context of such shifting geopolitical relations. The presentations will, in particular, examine the state of the traditional rules-based order in the light of contemporary global politics. Speakers (1) Tan Sri Datuk Dr Rebecca Fatima Sta Maria, Former Executive Director, Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Secretariat (2019–2024); Former Secretary General, Ministry of Investment, Trade and Industry Malaysia (2010–2016) (2) Dr Ong Kian Ming, Former Deputy Minister, Ministry of Investment, Trade and Industry Malaysia (2018–2020) (3) Toby Landau KC, Member, Duxton Hill Chambers (London) and Duxton Hill Chambers (Singapore Group Practice) (4) His Excellency Ajay Sharma CMG, British High Commissioner to Malaysia, British High Commission Kuala Lumpur Moderator Desmond Ho Chee Cheong, Co-Chairperson, Bar Council International Affairs Committee; Partner, Richard Wee Chambers
